The University of Lisbon (ULisboa) is the highest ranking and largest university in Portugal and is among the 200 best universities worldwide. Its current layout results from a recent merger of the former Universidade de Lisboa, whose origins can be traced back to 1288, and the Lisbon Technical University, founded in 1930. The current ULisboa is heir to seven centuries of experience in higher education. ULisboa is a privileged space for education, research, culture and art, with an educational offer encompassing all major disciplinary areas. Due to its remarkable track-record ULisboa is currently ranked among the leading universities of the world.

Further info about ULisboa: www.ulisboa.pt

The School of Arts and Humanities (Faculdade de Letras) is the highest-ranking and largest School in Portugal and is among the 200 best universities worldwide. It is an integral part of ULisboa and offers a wide range of undergraduate, masters and doctoral programmes across all major disciplinary areas. The School is home to more than 1200 students and 500 academic staff. The School has been awarded the highest possible rating in the most recent evaluation of Portuguese higher education institutions. The School is a dynamic and innovative environment where students are encouraged to think critically, explore new ideas and develop their own research projects.

In 2017, the School of Arts and Humanities was ranked 21st in the world in the QS World University Rankings, making it one of the best universities in the world. The School has also been ranked 1st in Portugal in the Times Higher Education World University Rankings and 5th in Portugal in the Academic Ranking of World Universities.

The School of Arts and Humanities is a vibrant and cosmopolitan community of students, faculty and staff from all over the world. The School offers a wide range of undergraduate, masters and doctoral programmes across all major disciplinary areas, including Arts, Humanities, Social Sciences, Business, and Law. The School has a strong emphasis on research and offers numerous opportunities for students to engage in research projects and to publish their work in international journals.

The School of Arts and Humanities has a long history of excellence in teaching and research, and has produced many notable alumni who have gone on to make significant contributions to their fields. The School is home to a diverse and dynamic community of students, faculty and staff from all over the world, and offers a unique and exciting learning environment.

If you are interested in applying to the School of Arts and Humanities, please contact the Admissions Office at admissions@letras.ulisboa.pt for more information.
The School of Arts and Humanities has a remarkable track record offering higher education in the areas of Archaeology, Classical Studies, Portuguese Studies, Philosophy and History.

A Contemporary School

The School of Arts and Humanities prepares students for the many challenges posed by the contemporary world, offering higher education in areas such as African Studies, Asian Studies, European Studies, Language Sciences and Translation.

A Creative School

The School of Arts and Humanities often offers education in areas such as Literary Studies, Arts and Cultures, Culture Studies, Art and Internet Studies or Art History.

An Innovative School

Students are offered the unique opportunity to combine various disciplinary fields by means of the flexible design of its courses. Arts and Humanities, Portuguese Studies and Languages, Literatures and Cultures encompass all the disciplinary areas of our School. The first degree in General Studies further allows for the combination of all course units of the School of Arts and Humanities with other ULisboa Schools including: the Faculty of Fine Arts, the Faculty of Sciences, the Faculty of Law or the Faculty of Psychology.

A Multicultural School

Over 2,500 foreign students annually attend the School of Arts and Humanities, including incoming exchange students, international students and external students enrolling in Portuguese language courses.

A Prestigious School

The School of Arts and Humanities of ULisboa is an important hub within a very wide international network of high-ranking higher education institutions. The wide range of courses offered benefits from carefully selected student and staff exchange protocols with top-ranking universities.

The School of Arts and Humanities offers an advanced curriculum, generating Mounting and ever more wide range of options and opportunities for students. It stands out as an institution that is highly regarded by its domestic and international stakeholders.

An International School

The School of Arts and Humanities of ULisboa is an important hub within a very wide international network of high-ranking higher education institutions. The wide range of courses offered benefits from carefully selected student and staff exchange protocols with top-ranking universities.

A Contemporary School

The School of Arts and Humanities prepares students for the many challenges posed by the contemporary world, offering higher education in areas such as African Studies, Asian Studies, European Studies, Language Sciences and Translation.

A Creative School

The School of Arts and Humanities often offers education in areas such as Literary Studies, Arts and Cultures, Culture Studies, Art and Internet Studies or Art History.

An Innovative School

Students are offered the unique opportunity to combine various disciplinary fields by means of the flexible design of its courses. Arts and Humanities, Portuguese Studies and Languages, Literatures and Cultures encompass all the disciplinary areas of our School. The first degree in General Studies further allows for the combination of all course units of the School of Arts and Humanities with other ULisboa Schools including: the Faculty of Fine Arts, the Faculty of Sciences, the Faculty of Law or the Faculty of Psychology.

A Multicultural School

Over 2,500 foreign students annually attend the School of Arts and Humanities, including incoming exchange students, international students and external students enrolling in Portuguese language courses.